

the company's that own many radio and tv stations in the nation are threatened by the fact that people will pay for a quality product (XM is just that) and they are doing all they can to stop it. It would be better time and money spent if they tried to improve the quality of what they produce. Maybe they should all listen to XM and NPR radio and take notes.